In Washington, 1,000 mostly young women marched down Connecticut Avenue and rallied in Farragut Park to hear radical speeches. Meanwhile, in Lafayette Park across from the White House, an older group rallied for "the possible dream— equal rights for women."

However, the liveliest rally was at Dupont Circle, Washington's hippy area, where spectaentertained with lively music and imaginative, slightly obscene, protest signs:

At the Pentagon information office, some female secretaries posted a series of protest posters made from file folders. They urged that the Pentagon ath-letic club be opened to women and complained that in government, men are called deputies and women secretaries.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26 (NYT).—The United States is planning the cease-fire in the Middle East.

This system would make it possible for pictures of the Suez Canal zone to be on President Nixon's desk in a matter of minutes after a U-2 plane flew over the disputed aren, took photographs on either side of the contested waterway and landed next to a building electronically linked by satellite to the Pentagon.

The transmitting device of the system, known as Compass Link, reportedly is being moved from Southeast Asia to an unspecified base in the Middle East.

The device is a self-contained portable unit that processes the film brought back by a pilot, changes the images into electronic impulses and beams the information to the nearest available

The complete unif—including a small, light building with a dish-shaped antenna on its roof—can be transported anywhere by plane or easily dropped on the deck of a ship.

There is only one Compass Link system and it was understood that Washington believed accurate data from the Middle East more important at the moment than maintenance of the circuit to Southeast Asia, where other surveillance systems are available. The application of Compass Link to the Suez Canal situation

Gov. Rockefeller, who in 1965 nomination since 1920.

Mr. Rockefoller took more than o percent of the vote.

Mr. Fauhus, who was in the race with seven other Democrats, was running ahead of attorney Dale Bumpers, with State Attorney General Joe Purcell running third. With 2,691 of the 2,701 Democratic precincts tabulated, Mr. Faubus had 150,277 votes. Mr. Bumpers 82,098 and Mr. Purcell 78,193. The 60-year-old Mr. Fauhus served as governor from 1954 until 1966, longer than any other chief executive in Arkansas history.

Starving the ILO

That hardiest of cold warriors, George Meany of the AFL-CIO, has stampeded the United States Senate into a cut-off of funds for the International Labor Organization. The offense of that body, which only last year received the Nobel Peace Prize amid vast acclaim from Meany and his associates. has been to appoint a Russian as one of the ILO's five assistant directors.

The appointment was made by C. Wilfred Jenks of Great Britain, elected three months ago to succeed David A. Morse of the United States as director general Mr. Jenks, who had the support of the AFL-CIO and the entire American delegation, won by a single vote ever a Frenchman backed by Moscow.

Even though the Soviet Union now has at least one representative in the secretariat of every other United Nations agency to which it belongs, American labor has always in the past succeeded in keeping any Russian out of top office in the ILO. The Jenks decision to name Pavel E. Astapenko of Russia eent Meany into orbit after the House had given routine approval to a United States appropriation of $3.7 million to cover its share of the ILO hudget for the last half of this year.

With the support of the United States Chamber of Commerce, representing American employers, the labor chief charged that the ILO had become an instrument for transmitting Communist propaganda. He told a House subcommittee that the new assistant director would use his post to "make each and every employee a Communist agent, whether he wants to be or not." The Lebor Department interposed no serious objection to this fearmongering, and the State Department's demurrers were so mild as to amount to an endorsement.

The Senate's vote to kill the United States contribution repudiates a two-year commitment to which this country pledged itself when the ILO 1969/70 budget was drafted. Under precedents set by the World Court, the United States could presumably be hauled up for default if it fails to pay.

But any such necessity is unthinkable in a period when the Nixon administration and Congress are jointly dedicated to moving from confrontation to cooperation in relations with the Soviet Union.

Secretary of State Rogers, deeply engaged in the effort to establish Middle East peace and to create a favorable climate for the renewed SALT talks, cannot fall to addrese to the House-Senete Conference Committee the strongeet possible plea for restoration of the ILO funds.

The Senate has done nothing in this instance to advance its claim to a large voice in foreign policy. Its meat-ax treatment of the ILO appropriation is made doubly ludicrous by its simultaneous approval of $401,000 for the useless Subversive Activitles Control Board, a body with neither dignity nor function, ceremonies—including peaceful demonstrations, marches and picketing-marking the 50th anniversary of women's suffrage are useful and meaningful. More than a few members of what is called the Women's Lib Movement, as well as many of the better organized groups, have repeatedly made clear that too many American women do not have equal opportunity, that male favoritism is widespread and that anti-feminine prejudice conscious or unconscious, has created a second-class sex over the centuries.

Liberation and Women

The one important contribution the movement can make now is to adopt tactics that enlist, rather than enrage, the still uncommitted or unreached. This in no way means that the basic position or philosophy of Women's Lib should be weakened; instead, it means that the power of an argument has nothing to do with the loudness by which it is shouted. Fortunately, many leaders in the movement, from writer Gloria Steinem to Lucy Wilson Benson, president of the League of Women Voters, are trying to spread this message.

Among the complaints voiced by some in the Women's Liberation movement is that many newspapers-The Washington Post included—discriminate against women when they print help wanted ads on the basis of sex. The latest word from the federal courts is that the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission—which holds that employers cannot advertise a preference for one sex

There should be no doubt that the over another unless sex is a true occupational qualification—does not have authority under its statutee to issue enforceable regulations about the use of column headings (men or women) in classified help wanted advertising. While The Washington Post continually examines its advertising policies, it currently lists its classified help ade under three headings: "Help, Men." "Help, Men and Women" and "Help, Women." This has proven to be convenient and effective for both the advertiser and job-seeker.

Beyond the legislative and economic questions, which will be solved as quickly as the courts and the Congress can move, are the emotional and cultural parts of Women's Lib. It should be clear by now that women do not belong exclusively in the home, or the office or any other place. They belong wherever each woman, as an individual; chooses to belong according to her talents and lights. This cultural rule applies to men. Why not women? What is needed is a change in those American organizations, institutions, and prejudiced myths that push m into roles, solely because they are women. Or that push men into arbitrary roles simply because they are men. Or that deny equal opportunity to blacks, or other minorities. The liberation that women are demanding today, if we understand it correctly, is not something that is uniquely denied to women.

International Opinion

Captive Journalists

After the death of two reporters in captivity and the release of three others, the odious blackmail involving the life of 19 journalists continues. The Indochinese Communists still refuse to give news from them. . Five tragic deaths and four releases leave 19 reporters unaccounted for, some for five months. Some of them are accused of an "incorrect attitude" toward the Cambodian "government" in Peking. . .

Let's ask a question: did not René Puissessean and Raymond Meyer die, as their American and Indian confrères, for having met with, seen and filmed NVN forces in Khmer territory? Did not the "incorrect attitude" of some of the survivore consist of refusing to call Cambodian the NVN forces they met? A legal or de facto authority cannot claim to impose a "correct attitude" on the whole world press.

Neither the Nazis nor the Simbas in the Congo ever attempted anything similar. The phenomenon is unprecedented. But the menace probably was also without a precedent: by finding NVN troops where U.S. soldier never set foot, the missing men threatened innocently the very foundation of a construction built on the idea of a "peace camp" defending peoples and "non-interference" through "liberation wars."

Confusing a camera with a submachine gun can explain an incident. It cannot explain that wounded men were left to die without medical treatment or that they were not released to be nursed elsewhere as our diplomacy requested in pressing terms. It does not explain the prolonged detention or the death of 27 reporters.

He has already given the Cambodians an assurance that the withdrawal from South Vietnam would not proceed if Cambodia fell to the Communists. In the long run this must mean that any settlement in Vietnam must be accompanied by a settlement in Cambodia whereby any remaining Vietnamese Communist forces there are withdrawn.

Of course Vietnam remains the touchstone of the withdrawal and eelf-help policy and it is in Saigon that the balances of assurance for the future and firmness in the present may be hardest to strike, especially at a moment when President Nixon is hoping that Mr. Bruce can get down to some frank and private dealing with the North Vietnamese in Paris. Though Saigon is even more febrile than it was in January, Mr. Agnew'e mission there may be one only of neighborhoods were acceptable and legal, leaving large numbers of black children in racially isolated schools

Classes in a few widely scattered rural districts have already gotten under way. In one of these, St. Helena's Parish-in southern Louisiana-a majority black district which had been in court fighting integration since 1952, 653 out of 830 white children in the district reported to desegregated schools for the first time. Black leaders complained that local officials had subverted a plan drawn originally by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that was designed to desegregate all the district's eight schools.

The HEW plan was revised, with the approval of a district court judge, to desegregate only the four formerly all white schools, leaving four all black schools - Even so. white children in this die-hard district were attending schools with large numbers of black children, outnumbered 270 to 80 and 149 to 92 in two of these integrated .

Maddox for 'Chaos' Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia has openly espotsed "chaos" by whites unhappy over desegrega-tion. He said he hoped there would be enough disruption to make the White House and the courts give the people a voice in education."

However, Gov. Linwood Holton of Virginia announced he would send his three children to newly desegregated schools in Richmond where blacks make up majorities of 71 percent and 85 percent.

Several dozen districts across the South will open school doors this week, but the major return to school and an accurate measurement of how many desegregation plans are actually being carried out, will begin on Aug. 31. Many districts will not open until after Labor Day, Sept. 7.

There are 2,691 school districts in 11 Southern states with nearly half (1,213) located in Texas. According to figures released by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 353 districts are due to implement voluntary desegregation plans that have been approved by HEW. These districts are in the following states: Arkansas, 51; Georgia, 103; Mississippi, 31; North Carolina, 29; South Carolina, 53; Florida, 18; Louislana, 5; Ten-tismus. And they are fed up with it... The term stems from the Czech word lopata, which means shovel. A free translation of polopatismus, therefore, is shovelism. What that means is that the people are having an overwhelming amount of propaganda, dogma, promises and boasts about intengible successes shoveled to them.

They are being shovel-fed with the line of the Communist leadership which claims to have brought the nation out of chaos "with the timely help of our Soviet and Warsaw Pact allies." What is being shoveled to the citizens of Czechbelovskia is a barrage of charges against the reform movement of the former liberal Communist leader Alexander Dubcek, which was crushed two years ago this month by the invading Soviet Union. The efforts of officialdom are aimed at destroying the image that grew up around Dubcek and the liberals who tried to give this country a more democratic and more humane communism.

But at the same time the authoritles are trying to stir up enthusiasm for a better-regulated, more centrally-governed future—to eradicate the apathy that pervades the populace and especially to get the industrial workers to get the country's stagnating economy rolling again.

Contradictions

Despite official claims to have increased industrial productivity, halted inflation and returned the country to normal, there is little evidence to back up the statistics that fill the pages of the Communist press and sparkle endlessly over television.

Contradictions abound by the shovelful. The press reports that in the Czech part of the federated republic industrial production for the first six months of this year has gone up more than seven percent over the same period last

If the figures are to be accepted it simply shows how bad things were last year after the Soviet occupation.

Official statisticians concede that even today only 60 to 70 percent of the regular working time is being put to actual production.

This is till the crux of Czechoslovakia's problem. Despite all efforts at drumming up enthusiasm for the joy of producing for the bomeland, the nation's workers are goofing off even more than is normal during these hot summer

And while life goes on at its leisurely pace there is a deadness of spirit that offers little of interest to citizens or visitors. We Czechs have an old saying

Moreover, there is a noticeable shortage of better quality food and a total lack of some items is the nation's stores. Nowhere is Prague could a housewife find single orange or lemon.

Mostly Cucumbers It is the height of the melor season in Europe but there wa not a single melon at the stalls.

Nor were there any salad green other than a few sprigs of parsle; and fresh dill. Tomatoes, which mostly come from Bulgaria, were in short supply and of poor quality.

The only thing the shopper: could find at the stands were cabbages, carrots and cucumberscucumbers all over the place.

"We call it the cucumber summer here in Prague," one housewife said after standing in line for more than an hour to get her daily supply of vegetables. The capital of the republic, noted for its Prague hams, had no ham for sale in the markets—only the tinned variety at the hard-currency stores. The only positive thing the authorities could report this mouth about food was that it looked as though there would be a good harvest and that "we have suc-ceeded in halting the dangerous decline in the production of meat."

Halting the decline in almost all aspects of life would seem to be a better objective in this cucumber summer end era of polo-

Com-poser Lionel Bart once came in dressed in his pajamas because he had got up in the morning and could not find a clean shirt to wear. - As we talked film director Roman

Fifteen years ago, Mr. Fish was an ill-educated 15-year-old from a poor part of London, working as a shop assistant and admiring the way bank clerks dressed. Now running a business with an annual turnover of some $600,000, he re-members the shrewd advice given him by another ragtrade entrepreneur who suc-cessfully crashed Britain's social barriers: "My dear, you think these smart people want. sake. One day you will discover that they are only after their curtains at cost price."

Polanski wandered through.

Says Mr. Fish: 'I'm glad to be a part of the creative renaissance that makes London so exciting. People like Mick Jagger and John Lennon are the cream of the country and fashion, like rock music, communicates what is happening in society."

He talks on over hmch at Burke's, London's newest club for the young and wealthy, where a simple snack of cheeseburgers and wine can cost $14 for two. Over the noise of a hysterical waiter (an Amer-ican girl has found insects moving around in her salad and he, giggling madly, is telling her that they are all very small Mr. Fish says:

Fashion is important to me as a form of anarchy. The message is, don't allow yourself to be told what to wear, or how to act, by others. If you do, the system will swal-

How the American Woman Sees Her Role

By George Gallup

DRINCETON, N.J., Aug. 26.-Like all mothers, I get fed up with being cooped up in the house. I'd probably even enjoy a part-time job, but I wouldn't change roles with my husband for · A Fatboro, Pa, mother of three small children talks about her role in life. "You hear a lot of talk these days about equality for women," she added. "Single girls may find some discrimination in the business world, but I'll bet most women are fairly satisfied with what they are doing." She would probably win her bet, according to the results of a special Galinp survey just completed which focused on the attitudes of American women toward their role in life, interest

Two-thirds of American women, mothers included, believe they get as good a break in the world today as men do. However among those who have attended college, from whose ranks the women's liberation movement has drawn much of its support, far fewer (53 percent) believe they get as good a break as men. Women are now organizing in city after city-publishing handbills, taking out full-page newspaper ads, picketing and threatening court suits. Today, the National Organization for Women (ROW) will lead a nationwide distaff strike for equality with men.

The feminists are protesting what they regard as "intolerable discrimination" against them in industry, government and the

Here are some of the other highlights of this Gallup survey: Among the two-thirds of American women (67 percent) who are presently not working in jobs outside the home, the weight of preference is not to work. Among those women who do crave outside employment (27 percent), most would choose a part-time

 Reasons cited by women not now working who want outside employment divide mainly between those who "need the money" and those who admit to being bored at home.

a Although 65 percent of U.S. women believe they get as good break in life as men, a majority believe women do not have the came chance as men to become corporate executives. Among women in the higher edocational brackets (those who have attended college) the overwhelming majority of 75 percent believe women are held back from top business positions because of their sex, while among those who have gone only to grade school, 36 percent

The survey was conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected sampling points July 10-12. Following are the questions asked of the 778 women interseved. The results are shown by all women, women who have children under 21 and by the respondent's educational level.

What Makes Monte Carlo Run: Money

By Hebe Dorsey

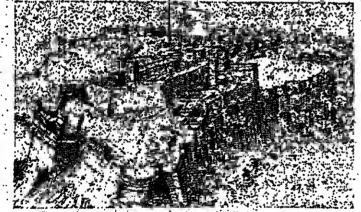

ONTE-CARLO, Aug. 26.-Money makes Monte-Carlo. usons, the Americans stayed me and the British came

The drop in the New York ch market was responsible for American drawback. "It'a ally more psychological than inclal," said Bernard Weinuten, the Seventh Avenue amulacturer. "A lot of those mple haven't changed any-ing in their way of life back me. But a man who's lost $1 illion on the stock market mehow doesn't feel in the 100d for spending $50,000 on a Junte Carlo jaunt. Many also at like staying closer to home

Actually, the American retreat 25 largely limited to the fonte Carlo habitues, the big :- penders who used to come for he whole season. A large numer of Americans did coment only for a few days.

But the British were back. The English contingent thinned out when currency restrictions were imposed in 1967, dropping from 35 percent of the Monte Carlo clientels to 9 percent. Since re-strictions were Hited last spring. all the big names, including Sir Graham and Lady Rowlanson, ir Harold and Lady Samuel ind Cecil Beaton, were here. They travel with their Rolls loyces, in the old British tradition," said Guy Levrier, public. relations man for the SBM (Société des Bains de Mer).

The Italians love Monte Carlo and there are more of them this season. They are elegant, colorful and, unlike the other groups, helong to the jeunesse dorce tradition. They are fierce gamblers and prefer to come here: because, as everyone knows, one doesn't like to gamble in one's hometown.

They account for 80 percent of our gamblers," said Mr. Levrier. "It's scary. in a way, because we hate to think what would happen to our casino if something went wrong in Italy." The Italians also come to Monte Carlo because it is close to home and yet much more in-

"We have a house here and have been coming for years because it's an elegant place where you don't feel the holiday crush. Italian beaches have become like Coney Island," said Mrs. Alex Mann of Milan.

"Also, it's the last place in the world where you can still feel La Belle Epoque. The jewelry one sees here is fabulous. Women can wear diamonds to the beach without it looking vulgar or in bad taste. Somehow, Monte Carlo can take it."

The French represent the mallest percentage. Those who do come usually own villas in the neighborhood and tend to lead a quieter home life.

But all in all. Monte Carlo is doing all right. Henri, the bartender at the Hôtel de Paris. is a busy as ever and said that the bar earnings were up 10 percent over last year. All the rooms in town are booked solid and the casho (known as "the factory" to the habitues) handles $200,000 every night.

The people who did come are living as high as usual. Oil baron Augustus Newman still has his yacht, The Southern Breeze, with a crew of 14, an-chared in the Monte Carlo harbor. He uses it for cruise luncheons, taking friends to Portofino and back

Art collector Patrick Lannan (who is on the board of ITT) has his private jet on hand too, for his next jump to Munich where he wants to look at modern art with stockbroker Jerry Sperling.

The conversation is too much. Mr. Newman was saying quite seriously how his dog was, yes, much hetter, thank you, since he flew to London to get him that copper arthritis bracelet that all the Beautiful People are wearing nowadays. But all that high living may take its toll. A couple of Miami men were spending their days playing gin rummy on the beach at $1 a point. Reportedly the high stakes led to one of them having a slight heart attack. "If I played like you, I would have died years ago," the doctor told

BLONDIE

By Alan Truscott

Sometimes tha defenders can make an accurate guess about the declarer's distribution. At other times they have no chance, as on the diagramed deal.

An opening bid of one diawould seem automatic with South's hand, but he selected one club. This would be comprehensible if he had been playing a "canapé" sys-tem in which the longer suit is kept in reserve, but his choice was nonsystemic.

However, the next two actions by North-South were based on partnership understandings that were explained to the opponents. The redouble did not necessarily show high-card strength - a subsequent raise in clubs, which was made on the next round, would show a redouble based on distributional support.

The cue-bid of two hearts was explained as a heart not necessarily showing extra strength, and from that point both sides bid vigorously, perhaps too vigorously.

When North - South reached five clubs it was certainly hard for East to know that his best action was to pass. He might have considered doubling instead of bidding five hearts, and would have been murt to discover that five clubs could not be defeated.

East - West could have been in trouble in five hearts, but South came to his opponents' rescue with a bid of six clubs: He felt that the vulnerability was in his favor for a sacrifice, a slight misjudgment.

West naturally doubled, for he had no wish to hear his partner bid any more hearts, and led the diamond ace. The declarer ruffed the opening lead in dummy and led a spade. NORTH man and Kingsley Amis may belong in the same review together if only because each, in his own way, has made such a singular contribution to the modern comic novel-Friedman with the black comedy of "Stern" and "A Mother's Kisses," Amis in "Lucky Jim" and a slew of others. But in "The Dick" and "The Green Man," each has left his old routines behind. And to tell the blunt truth of the matter. I read Mr. Friedman's novel fully expecting to devote this entire column to it, found myself both disappointed and without much to say, picked up "The Green Man" for a latenight browse (never in the past having been that great an Amis fan), and found it altogether spellbinding and impossible to stop reading even long after bedtime. So here we are with two wildly different sorts of nective tissue. Actually, it isn't that there's not much to say about Mr. Friedman's latest novel. it's more that it all got said, or thought, when his stage play, "Scuba Duba," first arrived. For there's really very little difference between the play and the novel, either in their themes or in the reactions they evoke.

books and not a shred of con-

In both we have heroes suffering comically from their own Jewishness, from the existence of the Negro race, from wives who have run off with blacks, from psychic ailments verging on the physical, and from a chronic indecisiveness as to whether to behave like grown men or charming but nasty little boys. In both we have incidentals like a daughter named Jamie and a black woman reputed to be named (joke) Eurethra. In both we are subjected to a relentless barrage of sick jokes (I hesitate, under the circumstances to call it black humor) mitigated presumably by the fact that it is never clear whether we are supposed to approve or disapprove of the peo-ple who make them.

And at both play and novel we find ourselves laughing nervously; guiltly wiping the sweat. from our palms; reassuring ourselves that we are, after all, supposed to be laughing at such wicked jokesters; and not with them, and remaining secretly unconvinced that this is so.

Having sweated out "Scuba Duba" and found it finally most unpleasant. I would have drop-ped "The Dick" after ten pages had it not been for the prose. Mr. Friedman brings an unflagging comic inventiveness to almost every line he writes. The formula may become predictable after a while, depending, as it invariably does, on incongruous juxtapositions of the sublime and the mundane, on little euphemisms running wild through his imagination ("... it would take the colored school with its colored math at least three years to catch up to level. Still, maybe that w so had. Standing out, as obviously must . . . perhap would [come to] see all of difficulties as just a lot of colored math.") But the mutations he dreams up as finite, and one is drawn in sheer wonder.

Funny? It can be cert; especially when one gets what Friedman has done the world of detectives and icide squads. But in the one comes away with the ing that one has just sper evening laughing it up chorus line of one-legged 1 ettes. And one turns with to the nearly timeworn lit devices from which Kir Amis has concected his h original yarn.

"The Green Man"—the refers to "a genuine coa-inn" of that name son miles from London, as we to something I mustn't revis, of all things, a ghost And because its hero, the through whose eyes its st events unfold, is an alco suffering, perhaps, from DTs and from other page matic infirmitles—someon other words, whose percer one can scarcely trustparadoxically a highly cre and nervous-making ghost :

Intrepid Tops Valiant

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 26 (Reuters).—The Australian yacht Gretel third straight race over France today in the America's Cup elimination series.

Gretel, with the loose headsail flapping wildly around her mast, had a big enough lead to coast across the line, 2 minutes 34 seconds ahead. The winning margin was estimated at 400 yards. Had the mishap occurred a halfmile earlier, it could have cost Gretel the race.

Gretel now needs only one more to qualify as challenger to the United States for the America's Cup next month.

In the U.S. selection trials today, Intrepid defeated Valiant for the day in a row and now appears almost certain to be the

Miro Mural: Jigsaw Puzzle of the Mind

By Richard Eder

GALLIFA, Spain (NYT).—In the hills 30 miles above Barcelona, work is being completed on a 30-ton mural designed by Joan Miro and fashioned by Spain's master ceramist, Joseph Llorens Artigas.

In a basement kiln 200 tiles with a deep garnet glaze were cooling. A huge. whale-shaped kiln in the cypress-fringed garden was being prepared for tiles with a dark blue glaze. Part of the mural fles packed in wooden crates and part is spread out on the floor of an outbuilding. When assembled and hung to cover one side of Barcelona's air terminal, it will be 165 feet long and 35 feet high. Barcelona museum officials say it will be the largest tile mural in the world. In any event, it will be bigger than two other notable murals by Miro and Llorens, one at UNESCO headquarters in Paris, the other at the Guggenheim Museum in New York.

Llorens-who is generally known crete-floored building where sections of the mural are matched numbered and crated. The tiles, each about a foot square and each a different series of shimmering tints under the basic color, are shifted and re-shifted within each part of the design.

The mural will be a pattern of abstract shapes in deep, glowing colors. Asked if Miro had given him a painting to work from, Lilorens looked pained.

"We don't work that way," he said. "Miro would come out here and make sketches with a pencil and tell me the colors he wanted, and I would tell him where he was wrong, and he would come back and look at the first batches of tiles and tell me where I was wrong Now he knows things are going well, and he hasn't come out for a while."

So until it is finally assembled and hung, the mural exists as crates and crates of jigsaw puzzle pieces whose eventual pattern is only in the minds of the painters and the potter.

Apropos of nothing, a shaggy headline from a Michigan weekly, as quoted by Marc Raizman, of Zurich: "Stars Useful in Two-Story House."

Left over from the days of the spoonerisms is diebard Mark Clifton, of Paris, whose original aberration goes something like this:

In one of those new Florida subdivisions hard by the Everglades lived an engineer his wife and toddling baby boy. One night after cocktails, the wife went out into the back garden to bring baby in from his playpen. Baby had disappeared. A thorough and frantic search through the swamp ensued, all in vain. Not a clue was found, nor even a ransom note though there were rumors among the locals that a gigantic shiny bird had been seen in the area chawing on what looked mighty like a baby boy. As a last resort. Seminole Joe, the swamp guide, was hired by the family. Joe disappeared into the morass for several days, armed with but a bow and arrow, and sure enough, he returned with baby in tow, scratched, wet but nonetbeless healthy. "How? Why?" asked the overjoyed parents of Seminole Joe. "By the might." said the tacitum guide, "of the Silvery Loon," Oh well . . .

McLuhan Connects Violence to Transistor Radio

ration.

By Edward Cowan

TORONTO. Aug. 26 (NYT).-After an absence of 15 months, Marshall McLuhan, the communications expert whom some people can't understand, reappeared on Canadian television Monday night and offered McLuhanesque observations about tribal violence. Freud, expressways, dropping out and former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Mr. McLuhan, whose theories about the impact of electronic communications have gained world renown, blamed "tribal violence" in Africa and the Middle East on 'free tran-
